Message from the National President and the Chief Executive Officer

The story of 2014 is one of renewal, innovation, and engagement. From our 2014 National Council Session/53rd Convention, to our revolutionary customer engagement work, to exciting new girl-led programming like Digital Cookie, Girl Scouts of the USA worked with our council partners throughout the country in 2014 to drive forward the reforms we set in motion last year.

Anna Maria Chávez, GSUSA CEO, and Kathy Hopinkah Hannan, GSUSA national president, at the 2014 Girl Scout National Convention.

The fiscal year began on October 1, 2013, when we officially stood up a new organization after a year of transformational and visionary thinking around our ways of work at GSUSA and across the Girl Scout Movement. The 2014 fiscal year would be about rallying our Movement around new initiatives, practices, and programs that would allow us to come together as one Movement, with one unifying mission for girls across America.

This process was kick-started with the launch of our Movement's first full "Strategic Learning" process since 2004. Our Core Business Strategy was further refined > over the summer of 2014 through a partnership between the Girl Scout Research Institute and youth development experts that resulted in the creation of a new core purpose: "Girl Scouts exists so that girls thrive." From this simple but elegant and profound concept grew a commitment to defining and delivering consistently on a core Girl Scout experience for girls and a clear customer focus that drove much of our work in 2014.

In the ensuing months, GSUSA rolled out a robust "Customer Engagement Initiative" that is making it easier than ever before to volunteer with Girl Scouts; launched innovative new programs like Digital Cookie that are keeping Girl Scouts fresh, fun, and relevant for today's girls; pursued exciting new partnerships with major brand ambassadors like Sheryl Sandberg; reaffirmed our commitment to the outdoor experience, investing in the development of a co-created, multi-year outdoor strategy; and redefined our Movement strategy for girls.

The fiscal year concluded in Salt Lake City with a rousing celebration of our Movement at our 2014 National Council Session/53rd Convention. We were joined by 6,500 girls, volunteers, alumnae, staff, and other supporters whose passion for our mission is boundless.

From our thought-provoking Conversations of Consequence and moving presentations by our National Young Women of Distinction, to stirring speeches by our outgoing National President Connie Lindsey and Leslie Weldon of the USDA Forest Service, the 2014 convention was informative and inspiring, showcasing the very best of what we can do together to advance the next generation of girls.

As we look to the future, we remain as committed as ever to creating a Girl Scout experience that meets the modern girl where she lives-in a fast-paced world where challenge and incredible opportunity await at every corner. With the new leadership elected at the National Council Session and a renewed spirit of optimism and opportunity, Girl Scouts is prepared to continue blazing a trail for girls, building on our past and recommitting ourselves to the principles on which we were founded: developing girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make our world a better place.

Customer Engagement Initiative: Enhancing the Volunteer Experience

As our transformational work unfolded throughout 2014, no area had greater importance or impact than our customer engagement work. Simplifying and streamlining Girl Scouts' volunteer process is a key goal we identified in 2013. And this past fiscal year, we were determined to bring about a seismic shift in our approach to working with adult volunteers—ensuring we provide an easy, efficient, and fun way for adults and girls to participate in the Girl Scout experience, so that more girls have the opportunity to thrive.

We worked hand in hand with councils, leveraging the innovation of one of our largest and most forward-thinking councils, to develop the Customer Engagement Initiative (CEI). Through CEI, Girl Scouts new volunteers to become troop leaders in a matter of days instead of weeks or months—and all volunteers to receive the information and resources they need, when they need it, through their personal computer or mobile devices. The national web platform will eventually unite the websites of all 112 Girl Scout councils nationwide so that girls, parents, volunteers, and alumnae can all receive the same first-class Girl Scout experience online, as well as access information relevant to their specific council.

A new and improved "2.0" version of the Volunteer Toolkit was released in spring 2014. The Volunteer Toolkit is a customizable digital planning tool providing resources and program content that is accessible via a variety of devices such as smart phones, tablets, laptops, and desktop computers. We conducted initial measuring of customer satisfaction and business metrics across participating councils in June and rolled out a new web platform in July. The web platform in July. The willingness of so many councils to make the necessary budgetary and staffing adjustments to formalize with us this new initiative speaks to their confidence that we are building tools that support effective change in our business model. Moreover, Girl Scouts is one of the first nonprofits to implement such a far-reaching business change program—a multi-year strategy that will empower us to optimally manage our resources and deliver on our mission for girls.

The Volunteer Toolkit is a customizable digital planning tool providing resources and program content that is accessible via a variety of devices.

is transforming the way we serve our members, adopting new, Movement-wide technology to build our capacity to deliver on our mission and improve the overall girl and volunteer experiences. CEI will also play a critical role in helping us reach our short-term goal of stemming membership decline, especially in the K–5 demographic that is so key to the health of our organization.

This promising initiative and innovative business model is supported by three technology platforms: Volunteer Systems, Volunteer Toolkit, and a national web platform. The Volunteer Systems component enables

Digital Cookie: Adding a 'Byte' to an Icon

At Girl Scouts, we understand that the ability to engage today's girls where they are—online—is vital to delivering on our mission and improving girl recruitment and retention rates. So in December 2014, we launched a groundbreaking new addition to our iconic cookie program. Digital Cookie adds a digital layer to the Girl Scout Cookie sale that enhances and expands upon the traditional "5 Skills" girls learn through the program (goal setting, decision making, money management, people skills, and business ethics). It also teaches them vital new skills for the modern economy, including emarketing, ecommerce, website maintenance, app usage, and how to use digital dashboards to set goals, track sales, and manage money.

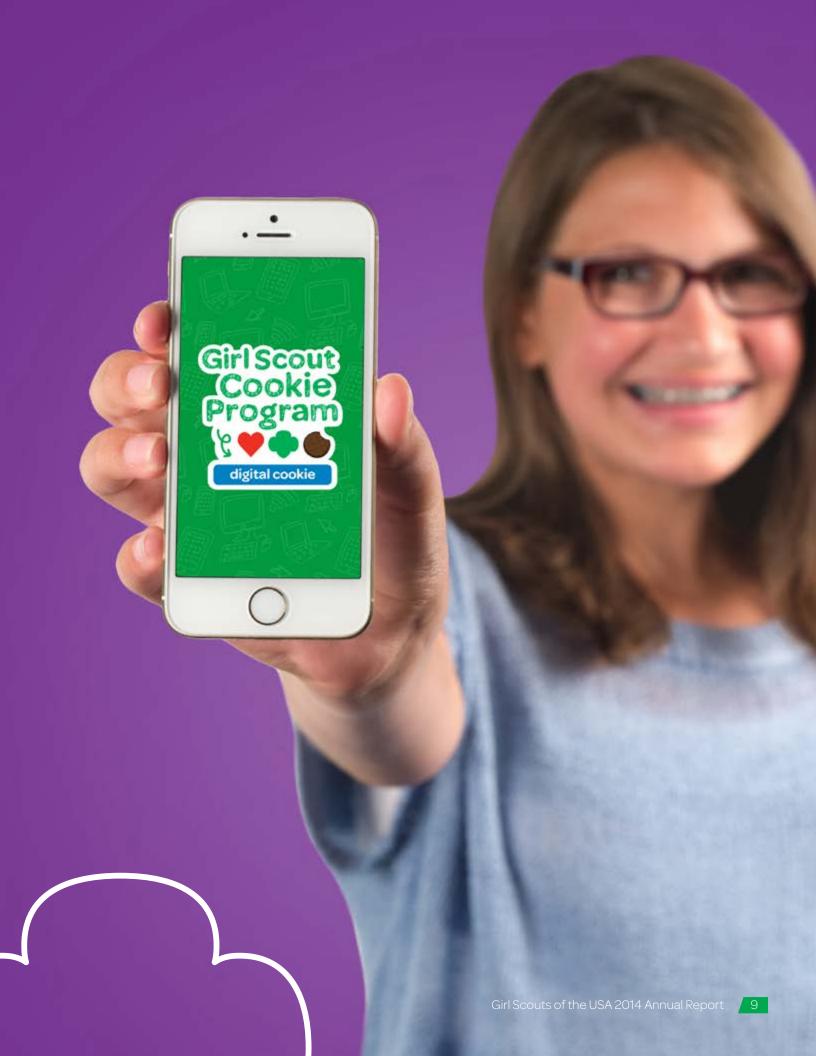

With Digital Cookie, depending on their local market and Girl Scout Cookie baker, girls use either a website they customize and maintain or a mobile app for taking orders in person. Both the website and the app let girls market cookies, process payments, and place shipment orders digitally. It's the first time in the nearly 100-year history of the Girl Scout Cookie Program that there is a national digital platform for selling cookies, making it easier than ever for customers to help girls learn basic business acumen by purchasing Girl Scout Cookies from any Girl Scout they know in the US.

Launching Digital Cookie was a Movement-wide accomplishment that led to increased engagement with our brand, and related media coverage greatly surpassed our hopes and expectations. Our strategy of allowing Girl Scouts to tell the Digital Cookie story from their perspective was hugely successful: nearly 70 percent of our coverage included messaging around the girl-centric and educational aspects of Digital Cookie. "Digital Cookie" and "Girl Scouts" trended in the numberone spot on Facebook on December 1, 2014, and the program received mention everywhere from morning news shows to Saturday Night Live and even NYC Taxi Jeopardy. Several networks named Digital Cookie as their story of the day for December 1, and it brought accolades from Fast Company, which ranked Girl Scouts among the "World's Top 10 Most Innovative Companies of 2015 in Not-for-Profit." Digital Cookie also had a big impact on GSUSA's online activity, generating unprecedented web traffic to girlscouts.org and girlscoutscookies.org.

Most importantly, early reports about Digital Cookie from our chief customer—girls—are heartening. "It allows you to reach customers that you would not reach otherwise," one Girl Scout told USA Today. "It will help me grow as a person and a future businesswoman."

The majority of Girl Scout councils are participating in Digital Cookie during the 2014–2015 cookie season. We plan to roll out an enhanced "Digital Cookie 2.0" at a growing number of councils in time for the 2015–2016 season, enabling us to reach ever more girls with a program that teaches twenty-first-century skills in twenty-first-century ways, so that they can create, operate, and succeed in both the traditional marketplace and via ecommerce.

National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend 2014

Building off of the incredible success of National Girl Scout Cookie Day in 2013, we extended the celebration to a full weekend in 2014, hosting National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend in February with events across America and a major push in traditional and social media.

We started things off on Friday morning, February 7, with GSUSA CEO Anna Maria Chávez and a group of Girl Scouts from the Girl Scouts of Greater New York Council opening trading at the NASDAQ Stock Exchange. The action then moved to Grand Central Station, where GSUSA hosted an event with 200 local Girl Scouts, who walked our "green carpet" selling cookies and showcasing the five essential skills they learn through our iconic cookie program.

The goal of National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend is to help communicate the true purpose of the Girl Scout Cookie Program, which helps girls develop the skills they need to become social entrepreneurs, reinvesting their earnings in their communities and, in the process, making the world a better place. Toward that end, we increased our annual cookie sales and revenues in 2014 by 120 percent over 2013. In just one day at Grand Central, the girls of the Greater New York Council sold approximately 10,092 boxes of Girl Scout Cookies, for total revenues of $40,368.

Nationally, National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend 2014 garnered major earned and social media, with massive coverage on Good Morning America, Bloomberg Radio, The Wall Street Journal, Parade, and the International Business Times, among many other media outlets. We also hosted a hugely successful "Twitter party," and our #cookieboss hashtag was a top trending topic on Twitter.

The success of National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend is in large part due to the increasing cross-functionality of our organization and the broader alignment of the Girl Scout Movement, with councils across the country leveraging GSUSA-created toolkits, messaging, and creative assets to get coverage for their troops and communicate the true meaning of the Girl Scout Cookie Program. This year's National Girl Scout Cookie Weekend was a tremendous event that launched cookie season throughout the country-and that whet the public's appetite for its next Girl Scout Cookie fix!

Honoring Our Past in Savannah, Georgia

In March 2014, Girl Scouts brought our CEO Summit—an annual gathering of all 112 Girl Scout councils from across the United States—"home" to Savannah, Georgia. In this special city, our founder, Juliette Gordon Low, was born on October 31, 1860; 52 years later, she created an organization that grew into a powerful Movement dedicated to empowering girls and preparing them for dynamic futures.

Juliette's values and ideals are enshrined forever in the Girl Scout Promise and Law, and her legacy lives on in the generations of girls and women who have come after her. The spirit of Girl Scouting reflects Juliette's roots in the South, where love of country is strong, as is commitment to service.

Her ideals—emblematic of the culture of Savannah—have traveled outward from this special place and been infused throughout our Movement, undergirding our goal of shaping female leaders across the entire world.

In short, Girl Scouts is Savannah—and Savannah is Girl Scouts.

During our time at the summit, we celebrated the birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low in conjunction with the Georgia Historical Society, Girl Scouts of Historic Georgia, and Juliette Gordon Low's family members, who generously donated a treasure trove of family correspondence, including a great deal about Juliette, to both the birthplace and the Georgia Historical Society. These items will help us preserve and honor the memory of Juliette and all that she stood for, as well as the Movement she started that continues to impact the lives of girls and women across the country and the world.

Mattel Partnership Launches First-Ever Barbie® Patch

In summer 2013, GSUSA announced a major partnership with Mattel Barbie® that led to the creation of the Barbie® "Be Anything, Do Everything" patch to encourage girls to explore the endless career possibilities available to them.

With upwards of 135 diverse careers under her belt, Barbie® has been a trailblazer for more than five decades.

In the spirit of her aspirational career path and in keeping with Girl Scouts' proud heritage of helping girls tap into their leadership potential, the "Be Anything, Do Everything" participation patch encourages Girl Scout Daisies and Brownies to explore career choices using the I Can Be... activity booklet. This engaging resource ties the fun girls have playing with Barbie to insights into the careers of today and tomorrow, with plenty of opportunity for discovery along the way. Offered in English and bilingual English/Spanish versions (a first for Girl Scouts), the booklet features many fun activities geared toward career exploration that girls can enjoy with their families, troop members, and friends; in one, girls pick a GSUSA badge topic and map out all of the interesting careers that relate to that topic. On completion of booklet activities, girls can collect a participation patch to wear on their Girl Scout uniforms.

There's a digital component to the Mattel Barbie®-GSUSA offerings, with online games and activities that further encourage girls to explore the careers that interest them.

There's also a digital component to the Mattel Barbie®-GSUSA offerings, with games and activities on GSUSA's For Girls website that further encourage girls to explore the careers that interest them.

Through this partnership, Girl Scouts brings a fun new element to girls' leadership experiences, one that is engaging and interactive and that leverages the appeal of Barbie to inspire the next generation of female leaders. Like Girl Scouts, Barbie is an American icon; together, Girl Scouts and Mattel are teaching girls that their futures are wide open with possibilities and that they can become anything they set their sights on.

Ban Bossy: The Power of Words—and Girls

On March 9, together with Sheryl Sandberg and her Lean In Foundation, as well as former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and a host of other major figures, Girl Scouts formally launched Ban Bossy, a nationwide campaign to change permanently the words people use to describe bold, assertive girls.

BAN BØSSY

Girls are nearly 2.5 times as likely as boys to cite fear of being called "bossy" as a barrier to becoming a leader. Ban Bossy wants to change this by encouraging everyone in society—parents, teachers, siblings, peers, and friends—to stop referring to assertive girls by this harmful term. The launch included a cover story in the March 2014 edition of Parade magazine, as well as an editorial in The Wall Street Journal coauthored by Sheryl Sandberg and Anna Maria Chávez.

Ban Bossy has become a cultural and media phenomenon in both the traditional and social spaces, inspiring an ongoing national dialogue about the leadership potential of girls and the ways in which society can have a negative effect on how they perceive their own potential. The campaign also went viral, with the #banbossy hashtag becoming a number-one trending topic on Twitter, where it trended for three days. On the Girl Scout Facebook page, we gained 6,200 new followers in the wake of the campaign's launch and there were more than 6,000 shares of the Ban Bossy graphics. Given that the word "bossy" itself registers as negative, it is likely that positive sentiment for the campaign is even higher than this data show.

Ban Bossy was an extraordinary success, positioning Girl Scouts at the forefront of a dynamic and versatile campaign that is both breaking barriers and demonstrating that words have the power to inspire and uplift—as well as to limit the scope of what girls believe is possible. Through Ban Bossy, we are putting girls on the national agenda, engaging adults, media, our national leaders, and girls themselves in a vital dialogue about girls' leadership potential and the need for us as a society to harness their power and promise for our country's future.

"Words have power,
and 'bossy' is no exception.
It's time to redirect that power to girls themselves, so that 'girl' and 'leader'
mean one and the same."

A NOTE TO DONORS

We have reviewed carefully all gifts made to Girl Scouts of the USA to ensure that each gift is properly recognized. A description of the criteria for inclusion precedes each section. The 2014 Honor Roll of Donors includes gifts made between October 1, 2013, and September 30, 2014. Occasionally, despite our best efforts, errors occur. If we have made mistakes, we sincerely apologize. Please alert us to such errors by contacting the Department of Fund Development by phone at 212.852.5062, or by mail at 420 Fifth Avenue, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10018. Please note we also make every effort to follow donors' preferences when compiling the Honor Roll of Donors. If you would prefer to have your name listed differently in the future, please let us know.

JULIETTE GORDON LOW SOCIETY

Girl Scouts of the USA gratefully acknowledges the following individuals who have made such a commitment to our Movement. A double asterisk (**) denotes the Founding Chair of the Juliette Gordon Low Society.

Girl Scout Mission Statement

Girl Scouting builds girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make the world a better place.

The Girl Scout Promise

On my honor, I will try:
To serve God and my country,
To help people at all times,
And to live by the Girl Scout Law.

The Girl Scout Law

I will do my best to be honest and fair, friendly and helpful, considerate and caring, courageous and strong, and responsible for what I say and do, and to respect myself and others, respect authority, use resources wisely, make the world a better place, and be a sister to every Girl Scout.
